Capgemini University wins the CorpU 2014 annual award for Excellence and Innovation

Paris, 29 September 2014 – Capgemini, one of the world's foremost providers of consulting, technology and outsourcing services, today announced its Corporate University has won the CorpU 2014 annual award for Excellence and Innovation for outstanding work in corporate learning and talent development. Capgemini University was recognized in the Alignment category of the CorpU awards, which measures how well an organization designs and executes its corporate learning to produce the desired outcomes in a company's strategy.

Capgemini stood out for its focus on the Digital Transformation (DT) Learning Journey, which over the course of two years delivered interactive training to close to 3,000 Capgemini Consulting client-facing consultants. With positive feedback from participants, Capgemini University has maintained its momentum of delivering innovative learning solutions to help employee personal development and to develop innovative service offerings within the wider Capgemini Group.

Steven Smith, Capgemini University Director said, "We are honored to be acknowledged by CorpU as delivering excellent results through our Digital Transformation Learning Program. The award is testament to our ongoing collaborative efforts to produce new and innovative training content to develop our people and consequently benefit our business globally."

The CorpU 2014 Annual Awards for Excellence and Innovation is a prestigious platform that rewards outstanding work in corporate learning and talent development. Now in its 16th year, the program is independently judged by industry leaders and experts and is the longest running awards program in the corporate learning arena. The awards honor corporate, non-profit, and governmental learning organizations that improve both business and employee performance.
