Safran to set the ultimate challenge for Capgemini Super Techies Show finale

Finalist teams asked to use technology to create a nationwide network of e-infopreneurs

Paris, Mumbai November 25, 2014 – Capgemini, one of the world's foremost providers of consulting, technology and outsourcing services has announced that Paris-based Safran will feature in the final of the Capgemini Super Techies Show (CSTS) Season 3, setting the contestants their ultimate challenge. In the concluding episode of this year's show, due to air on November 30, Safran will ask the three finalist teams: Team Tech Tree, Team O-T-B Thinkers and Team Fractals to define the framework of a technology solution to create a nationwide network of e-infopreneurs<sup>1</sup>.

The three finalist teams will battle it out for the coveted title of 'Capgemini Super Techies of Season 3' and a grand prize of USD 25,000, by presenting their creative technology designs to three finale judges:

- Sanjeev Shriya, Managing Director - Smart Chip Limited and Syscom, subsidiaries of Morpho (Safran)
- Salil Parekh, CEO Application Services One<sup>2</sup> and Member of the Group Management Board of Capgemini
- Patrick Nicolet, CEO Infrastructure Services, Head of LatAm and Member of the Group Management Board of Capgemini.

The finalists are mentored by Franck Greverie, Global Head of Cyber Security at Capgemini Group.

Commenting on the finale of CSTS Season 3, Aruna Jayanthi, CEO, Capgemini India said, "We are delighted to partner with Safran for the finale of Capgemini Super Techies Show Season 3. The challenge Safran and Sanjeev Shriya put forth is a perfect fit for the grand finale episode. Finalists will be able to
