Capgemini University is recipient of the prestigious Brandon Hall Group Excellence Awards 2015

Recognized for outstanding learning programs in two categories

Paris, 29 January 2016 – Capgemini, one of the world’s foremost providers of consulting, technology and outsourcing services, has won two prestigious Brandon Hall Group Excellence Awards 2015 for its contribution to developing innovative and business focused learning programs. Capgemini University was congratulated at the Brandon Hall annual Human Capital Management Excellence Conference, held at the end of January in Florida.

Now in its 21st year, the Brandon Hall Group Awards is a renowned industry platform which recognizes leading companies from across the globe for successfully designing and implementing effective learning and development programs within their organizations.

Capgemini University won a gold medal for “*Software Engineer of the Future MOOC*¹” in the ‘Best Unique or Innovative Learning and Development Program’ category. It was also awarded a silver medal for its “Engagement Manager Certification” in the ‘Best Learning Program Supporting a Change Transformation Business Strategy’ category.

“We are delighted to be recognized once again in the Brandon Hall Group Awards for our learning programs that drive positive business and organizational outcomes,” said Steven Smith, Corporate Vice President, Capgemini University Director. “It is a testament to Capgemini University’s ongoing commitment to providing high quality learning programs to its employees globally. The Software Engineer of the Future MOOC and Engagement Manager Certification programs deliver flexible solutions that support both learning and delivery objectives and help accelerate the development of key groups of employees.”

“The high quality of work and commitment to driving business results among our award winners never fails to amaze me,” said Rachel Cooke, Chief Operating Officer of Brandon Hall Group and head of the awards program. “The winning programs deliver meaningful business results to their organizations. Winning an Excellence Award is a great honor, but the real winners are the organizations themselves and their customers and clients because of the innovation and customer focus they demonstrate.”

The awards mark a consecutive win for Capgemini University, which also took home multiple learning awards in 2014.
