Capgemini recognized as a Leader in Avasant RadarView report for Manufacturing Digital Services

Paris, March 18, 2021 – Capgemini announced today that it has been positioned as a Leader by Avasant, a leading advisory firm, in its RadarView™ report for Manufacturing Digital Services 2020-2021. Avasant evaluated over 30 manufacturing service providers respectively against the key dimensions of practice maturity, investments and innovation, partner ecosystem and domain ecosystem.

The Avasant Manufacturing Digital Services 2020 2021 RadarView™ Report, which identifies top-tier global service providers supporting the manufacturing industry in digital transformation, highlighted Capgemini's ability to differentiate itself through leveraging emerging digital technologies for outcome driven solutions and helping clients become more nimble and closer to their customers. It also noted Capgemini's continuous investment in next-gen technologies such as Digital Twin (smart engineering), 5G (fueling IoT and edge computing) and evaluating potential use cases for sub-industries within manufacturing through digital convergence.

"The positioning as a Leader by Avasant in its Manufacturing Digital Services RadarView™ assessment is a testament to Capgemini's breadth of expertise in the Intelligent Industry: deep product engineering capabilities, global technology skillsets and extensive domain and industry knowledge. This market leading combination enables digital transformation across the entire value chain to unlock new intelligent business outcomes for our clients, all powered by data," said William Roze, CEO of Engineering, Research and Development at Capgemini and member of the Group Executive Committee.

Pooja Chopra, Research Leader at Avasant said, "Through a data-driven approach and augmentation of advanced digital technologies, Capgemini has developed customized industry-specific offerings for implementing outcome-driven solutions. The acquisition of Altran and growing alliances with technology providers and specialized companies have further strengthened its product portfolio in product design, production, and supply chain. Delivering high value to clients by expanding its digital capabilities through acquisitions and strategic partnerships has placed Capgemini as a leader in Avasant's Manufacturing Digital Service RadarView for 2020-2021."
