Capgemini selected as a leading partner for delivery transformation and operational excellence by leading German Auto Manufacturer

Capgemini to provide application development and maintenance services for next five years

Paris and Bangalore, September 23, 2020 – Capgemini announced today that it has been selected by Mercedes Benz Research and Development India (MBRDI) to provide application development and maintenance services. The contract was awarded as part of a vendor consolidation exercise. Capgemini was selected as one of the major partners in this multi-vendor deal, for its industry leading expertise in application services, and proven technology and delivery capabilities in business transformation.

This renewed agreement is the result of a strong foundational partnership between the two organizations established over the last few years. Under the terms, Capgemini will enable application development and maintenance across all the client's application clusters including, generic, testing and niche technologies. The engagement will help to drive strategic change and disruptive innovation through increased efficiencies, continuous improvement, optimized costs, a more secure application landscape, and improved compliance and governance.

Ashwin Yardi, CEO of Capgemini in India and member of the Group Executive Committee said, "Leading businesses leverage technology to create engaging customer experiences for their clients. They also want to steer market disruption through innovation to deliver enhanced business value. We are delighted to be a lead partner in the digital transformation journey of the captive unit, to transform their current IT into valuable assets aligned to the business objectives of their headquarters."
